Programme Study Options

The Diploma is available through Public Courses, Distance Learning, In-house and for very experienced practitioners, by Exam Only.

Public Courses

The Public Courses, which comprise two three-day face-to-face workshops are usually very popular. They have a limited number of places at any one time in order to maximise the learning experience. Workshops provide an additional opportunity for interaction and networking.

Minimum numbers in any jurisdiction must be met in order for Public Courses to run. Where a Public Course does not meet the required number, individuals who have enrolled will be invited to transfer onto the Distance Learning option.

Distance Learning

Distance Learning is for those who are resident in a jurisdiction where Public Courses are not running. An exercise work book is included in course materials to ensure as thorough an education as is possible. This is supplemented still further with on-line testing and presentations on studying specific modules that can be downloaded. Those who choose this study option can also be allocated a mentor and receive additional support from a dedicated tutor.

In-house Courses

In-house options are available to those firms who wish to put a minimum of 15 people through the Diploma programme at any one time. There are several advantages to this option including a reduction in price per head and the ability to include processes unique to the firm in workshop discussions. For more information about this option, contact Helen at the International Compliance Association by email, hlangton@int-comp.org

Exam Only

Those who are very experienced practitioners and hold appropriate qualifications may be eligible for the Exam Only option. Such individuals are exempt from attending workshops and from submitting assignments. Those who select this option are provided with manuals, support readings and texts, and their achievement is measured on the basis of their examination performance. However, the International Compliance Association always recommends undertaking the fullest programme available to ensure the best possible learning experience.
